Japan's Comments on ISO/IEC DIS 8859-14

Title: Information technology -- 8-bit single-byte coded graphic character sets -- Part Part 14: Latin alphabet No.8 (Celtic)

The National Body of Japan disapproves ISO/IEC DIS 8859-14 for the reasons below.
If the comments are satisfactorily resolved, it will change its vote to approval.

Technical comment:

The identifier of LATIN CAPITAL LETTER Y WITH DIAERESIS (bit combination 10/15) should be corrected to U+0178.

The proposed value U+00AF is the identifier for MACRON.

Editorial comment:

Referenced standards should be written correctly.

"ISO/IEC 8824:1995...Abstract Syntax Notation One(ASN.1)" should be "ISO/IEC 8824-1:1995, Information technology - Abstract Syntax Notation One(ASN.1): Specification of basic notation"

> Comments accompanying the U.S. vote of Disapproval for DIS 8859-14
> It is the US long stated position that additional parts of ISO/IEC > 8859 should not be created, except to capture existing 8-bit practice.
> Rather than addressing problems with particular solutions which are > costly to implement, industry efforts should be focused on > implementing a comprehensive solution via the support of ISO/IEC > 10646. All Celtic characters in 8859-14 are in 10646.
> The adoption of ISO/IEC 10646 by the vendor community is making rapid > process. Therefore it can not be argued that new 8859 parts must be > accepted for lack of practical alternatives. As an intermediate > solution, the new character set can be registered for consistent > implementations.
